

THE BFUU COMMUNICATOR

Berkeley Fellowship of Unitarian Universalists

January 2019

Upcoming Sunday Services

Services at 10:30 a.m.

January 6: To Be a Blessing

Rev. Dr. Sue Magidson, Guest Worship Leader

Rev. Dr. Rebecca Parker, past President of Starr King School for the Ministry, invites us to “choose to bless the world.” This sounds great in theory, but what might it look like in practice? How does your life bless others? Are there things you might consider doing differently in 2019? How would it feel to live your life with the intention of being a blessing?

January 13: To Tell the Truth...

Rev. Emily Hartlief, Guest Worship Leader

Religious and ethical traditions around the world share the value of telling the truth. But what about in situations where the truth is not always clear? Or easy? What does telling the truth make possible?

January 20: Selma for the Complete UU

Rev. Marsh Agobert, Worship Leader

Of all the world's denominations, Unitarian-Universalism is neither among the oldest nor largest. Yet Dr. Martin Luther King addressed UUs on many occasions, including our General Assembly. What was our connection and from where did it come? Who were we before and during Selma and how can it inform who we are now?

Know thy self, oh UU. By coming to terms with history we may not be doomed to repeat it and yet we may be able to learn from it and move forward in new ways...if we can continue to grow and apply a little wisdom.

January 27: Service as Ministry

Lauren Renée Hotchkiss, Guest Worship Leader

We are all familiar with the various careers in professional church work and chaplaincy being considered a ministry. But if we expand this concept to include any calling to a life of service, we find that ministry is much broader than we are often accustomed and can include medicine, the arts, social justice and so many more. And what if we widen the circle still wider and view all human endeavor as an opportunity to be of service, or in other words a ministry. MDiv, ministry candidate, and chaplain Lauren Renée Hotchkiss discusses how she integrates ministry and service in her church activities, chaplaincy, and music, and how we might do so as well.

Welcome to the All New (read: renewal) Ministers' Corner!

I'm excited about this and hope you will be too.

Each time I speak on Sunday morning, I have a battery of sources that have, over time, contributed to that morning's message. Sometimes I print these out to serve as handouts for those curious listeners who want to explore the topic in greater depth. I promise you, I've barely scratched the surface. Every now and then someone asks about the message and I actually remember to provide them the sheet.

Today will mark the start of another avenue of communication for us, AND, as an integral part of those conversations, I will be inviting, sometimes an individual and often a panel to participate with us. In order to pack this panel into your (well, wherever you may prefer to listen or view) you will need access to a Web ready computer and about as much time as you'd take to read a fragment of your latest book or a single show on the tele. You will, however, run the risk of learning new things about old topics, and unexpected new things that may affect your view of, well everything. Some of these will fit into categories that already hold your interest; while others will defy familiar categorization.

This month we'll revisit a recurrent topic that I believe is one of those states that lives at the heart of human harmony...communication and understanding. This is beyond tolerance and merges into 'True Relationship.'

Take a chance – click the link... it's virus free.

1. Guessing that most of us reading this are NOT Neo-Conservatives – here are two VERY interesting insights into who your adversary may be, and more important – HOW they may view the world. The most important and challenging part of communication is, of course, listening.

1. One of the most controversial topics regarding gender identity revolves around the question of Nature or Nurture...or even choice. I.E. for example – does one CHOOSE to be gay or is one born with an orientation hardwired into the being? This conversation was also broadcast by Hidden Brain, this time on October 08, 2018 and it investigates the possibility that political orientation may be more heavily influenced by genetic (and more likely) epigenetic inclinations. I found this argument provocative and more feasible than I'd expected.

Hospitality Corner

By Elinor Roberts

Beloved friends and congregants! It is still December as I write this but it will be January very soon. For me, January will mark a year that has passed since I was knocked off kilter and into the hospital, and I had to teach myself “radical rest.” Today, my health has been restored by that radical rest (“Knock on wood,” as my grandmother would say while knocking on her own forehead, so as not to tempt fate), and I am so grateful to you, especially the Hospitality, Caring, and Membership Committee folks for helping me make some of the changes needed to heal body and spirit.

You sent me food and flowers and cards. You left friendly phone messages and said things like, “you don’t have to call me back!” – music to the ears of an introvert like me. On Sundays, you encouraged me to sit down during coffee hour while you pitched in with setup and cleanup. You asked, “How are you?” and really wanted to know. None of these are earth-shattering actions. But great comfort is delivered by ordinary kindness in small moments. And small moments add up in the most gratifying way.

At the BFUU post-Thanksgiving potluck, several people told me they’d had such a good time with one another, it “felt more like a real thanksgiving than the other one.” And if you were at the December potluck, you might remember I went up to the stage and took a photo. It was a powerful moment: seeing your faces, feeling the warmth in the room and knowing the depth of our kinship. It might sound corny but moments like these make me feel like I’ve won the lottery. Many thanks for all you do to make it so.

(BFUU Hospitality Committee meets on the fourth Sunday, along with Caring and Membership.)

Social Justice Watch

Follow-up on a previous SJC workshop celebrating the ICAN Nobel Peace Prize which was awarded after 122 nations (not the US) signed the 2017 UN Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons.

1. Due to the workshop at BFUU, there were substantial shifts of investments into socially responsible Green Century Fund, the first mutual fund to go 100% fossil fuel free decades ago and now the first fund to declare itself compliant with the Nuclear Weapons Ban Treaty.
2. On International Human Rights Day, Dec. 10, NuclearBan.US co-founders Vicki Elson and Timmon Wallis, who had led the BFUU workshop, presented Berkeley Mayor Jesse Arreguin and Councilmember Cheryl Davila with a framed certificate congratulating Berkeley on confirming our Nuclear Free status and on being compliant with the Nuclear Weapons Ban Treaty. Tacoma Park, MD is the only other city thusfar so honored. BFUU member Phoebe Sorgen attended the ceremony, and also helped lobby Oakland officials and Barbara Lee, after which they lobbied Marin County officials.

Valve Turner Leonard Higgins

Leonard Higgins led Sunday Service on 12/16, and came back in the evening to speak about the Valve Turners. He is a mentee of Joanna Macy, and she attended the event and spoke briefly when we circled up.

Joanna Foley was the liaison who brought him to BFUU. (Thank you, Joanna!)

It turns out that Jay O'hara, a young Quaker who was involved with the five simultaneous actions of shutting off fracked oil flow, was in town and he also came and discussed.

We were graced with Virginia Hollins-Davidson's powerful voice/presence kicking off the event with a couple of fab movement songs including "Somebody's Hurtin my Brother" (from the Poor People's Campaign)

Then Leonard screened some footage from "Reluctant Radical" (which had been screened that afternoon) and also of the inspiring Swedish 15 year old Greta Thunberg.

We then circled up for conversation/discussion.

Thank you, Joanna, Virginia, David M., Frances, and everyone else who chipped in to help with the event, discussion, and/or refreshments. And thanks, Ben, for helping publicize.

Human Rights and Dignity in the Americas

Celebrating the publication of Human Rights and Wrongs and Plan Colombia

WOW!!! is the best way to express what came about last night in the management of “Human Rights and Dignity In The Americas.” Our authors were, per usual, outstanding in their talk and answers about their books. But the management—for me—was the WOW experience!!! I thought I was going to be alone with David to do all the jobs of setup/donation table/takedown.

1. Setup: Hall was open and all set up by Vic and Cheryl! More goodies, drinks brought in and set up by both Adrienne and John. Phoebe arranged for a wonderful volunteer for the door.

2. Program: Music on the piano by Vic – as attendees came in and began feasting – Christmas and modern dance-to music (a number of us danced-sang)! As we parted at 9:30pm, Vic said he loves playing the piano and is a reason for his coming and entertaining voluntarily. He also played after the event as people were having more eats and drinks, talking, buying books, etc. Everyone helped with a seating arrangement change, and David made helpful adjustments to sound. Needless to say our speakers wonderful with people seemingly very appreciative. A good Q&A period. Book sales seemed good.

3. Cleanup: Several people helped put chairs away. Sexton Guy Colwell arrived before the end of the program, and he, Vic, and Cheryl helped clean and close up.

Thanks to all of you, and WOW!!!

Roy Zimmerman RIZE UP

BFUU Social Justice and Music Committees teamed up to bring political satirist Roy Zimmerman’s concert RIZE UP to Fellowship Hall on Fri 12/14.

Many folks chipped in to help. Thanks to Dr. Susan, Margaret, Elayne, Jeff, Ben, Christine L., Jeffrey, Melissa, Jesse, Victor, and Cheryl.

Delightful evening imo. I laughed so hard, and cried a little too, and hope Roy will come to BFUU every 6 months...
